PERSONAL BITE WHY DON'T 90% OF WOMEN SEE THEMSELVES AS LEADERS?

Do you see yourself as a leader? When asked this question many women will say "No, I'm not a leader" but then when asked what they do at work, at home and in the community they are involved in many leadership roles and doing them very effectively. Why are women so reluctant to fully own their leadership calling? Dianne will draw on her experience in coaching leaders as well as her own leadership experience and insights from research to make you aware of your own leadership qualities and encourage you to use your abilities to make your world a better place.

DIANNE TAYLOR

Dianne is passionate about helping people and organisations discover and realise their potential. Her experience as an entrepreneur and business owner (Dianne is a director of her own company Sirius Business) combined with work experiences across the public, private and not-for-profit sectors provides her with a unique perspective on business management – holistic, strategic and practical – which she brings to her coaching, training and consulting work. This experience is supported by qualifications in coaching, training, business and human resource management. Dianne lectures in Leadership and Human Resource Management at Monash University and is also actively engaged with her local community, including providing pro bono leadership coaching in not-for-profit organisations and serving on Monash Economic Development Forum, an advisory board for Monash Council on business issues.

BIBLE BITE

Sally Tonkin will discuss a Bible extract impacting business and professional women.
